The text

Peter is seven years old. He goes to a school near his house. He always goes there and comes home on foot. However, last week he returned home from school late. His mother was in the kitchen and she was waiting for him.

“Why are you late today?” She asked him.

“My teacher was angry and he sent me to the headmaster after the lesson.” He answered.

“The headmaster? Why did he send you to him?”

“Because the teacher asked a question and no one of the pupils gave him the right answer except me.” Said Peter.

“But why did the teacher send you to the headmaster, then? Why didn’t he send all the other stupid pupils instead?” The mother asked her son angrily.

“It’s simple, mum. His question was: who put the glue in my chair.”
