The text:

1- Tom Wilson is an old rich man. He lives in an old house with many black cats. His neighbours don't like him because he never helps the poor and loves money very much.

2- When a friend pleads him for some money, he usually says: "I'm a poor man. I can do nothing for you. I'm in need myself. Go and look for a job. Lazy!"

3- Every night, before going to bed, he usually shuts the doors and windows firmly and then opens his box of money to count his fortune. When he feels he made a mistake, he recounts again and again until he is sure that no penny is lost.

4- One night, he was very tired, so he forgot the windows open. A man crept inside and took all Tom's money and put a piece of paper in the box instead. When Tom came to count his wealth, he was surprised. The box was empty. Nothing there but a letter! Tom unfolded and read it: "Thank you very much for the money. I need it because I'm out of work. I will give you your money back after a week."
