Today we have become used to the idea that small children should have freedom. Good teachers usually provide them with bright and (pleased/pleasure/pleasant) classrooms. They are always listening to the children's stories. They give them plenty (at /for/ of) time to play. They let children (to choose/choose/choosing) what they wish to do. Will they paint a picture? Play with sand and water? Pretend to be shopkeepers or doctors and nurses? Teachers (know/knew/have known) that children learn best when they are interested in what they do. But this was different when Maria Montessori (is/ was/has been) young. When she first visited Italy and other European countries, she found that children (s sitting/were seated) in at dark desks in uncomfortable classrooms. They were (also/ however/ but) dressed in black and were writing in black ink. Indeed, it is thanks to Maria Montessori that the child of today enjoys a pleasant school life.
