Children misbehave for a variety of different reasons. Perhaps they don't understand the rules, they feel they need to assert their own autonomy, or maybe they wish to test the limits imposed on them. However, some children misbehavethey are experiencing internal distress: anger, frustration, disappointment, anxiety, or sorrow. The younger a child is, the more likely he is to call attention to his distress through his behaviour. As a child matures, however, there is an expectation that he will be increasinglyto resolve much of his distress on his own and will express his feelings through words ratheroutwardly directed misbehaviour. There are also children, however, whose behaviour istroubling to others. these cases, the children's behaviours are outside of the range of what is considered normal or acceptable for their level of.....Perhaps most alarming is thatof these children show little remorse, guilt, or understanding of the damage and theby their behaviour.

It is essential to ingrain the importance of family into your children.

They need to know that friends will come and go, but family is the one constant they will have in life. As a parent, it is your job to foster the bond (between-betwin-betwen) siblings, as well as among each parent and child. This is especially important in a single-(childs-children-child) family. If it's feasible, expose (those-this-that) children to as (much-many-more) time as possible with extended family, preferably cousins (which-who-what) are similar in age to them. There are many other ways (to help-help-helped) your child realize that family is of the utmost importance. This understanding will remain with them as they grow (in-off- up), marry, and embark on (parenthood themselves - parenthood themselves-themselves parenthood).

3/ Provide the bracketed words with the right tense or form. (4 marks)

In the midst of the political chaos that prevailed in 17th century Tunisia, on a background of poverty, famine and epidemics appeared a sublime and unique character in the annals of the country: Aziza Othmana. She (birth)in one of the wealthiest families who exercised their discretionary power over the country. She seems to have had a (remark)education and a (higher)religious instruction during her childhood. Despite the dangers the journey involved she completed the pilgrimage to Mecca and (come)back to spend the rest of her life in Tunisia. Towards the end of her life, dedicated to prayer and (charitable), she left her huge fortune to the poor to ease (they)misery. The income from (many)than 90,000 acres of planted or sown land would (being)used for various movements: slave emancipation and liberation of prisoners.

Relationship between parents and children is very important particularly with their mothers. Yet, some mothers don't care about their children and don't pay attention to them. The cause of this problem is the mothers working.

First, children need their mother's affection. Second, they want to have a mother who helps them in their studies and in their own life. Unfortunately, they are deprived of this right, for the mother works all the day outside and at home. At night she ends up tired and she sleeps quickly. Children want more time to enjoy their childhood ; if they don't, they will be affected by bad friends and learn dangerous habits such as smoking, drinking, drugs which may lead them to delinquency and consequently the children will fail in their school life.

Finally, children need their mother with them all the day to make them feel self confident... How nice is to have a non-working mum ! It's a great pity to have a working one. Don't you think so ?
