THE TEXT:

1-Travelling can be a very fun and exciting way to vacation with your family, but it does not always turn out as expected. I have travelled a lot with my family over the years, but some experiences were worth forgetting altogether. I remember a particular travelling experience I had with my dad and step mom, which sticks out in my mind for the wrong reasons.

2-My dad and step mom had decided to drive to California for our family vacation instead of taking a flight. This was supposed to provide educational value, since we would be able to stop along the way and look at various sites in each state. Well everything was going as planned until we decided to take a break and stop at the Grand Canyon. I had always wanted to see this exciting place and had decided to write a book report on it for eighth-grade English class; I was 14 at that time. Well we got out of the car and were walking around one of the paths to get to a cliff so we could take a family photo when I slipped and fell.

3-I fell on a piece of uneven rock, and instantly felt the sensation of pain run up my leg. My dad took me to the nearest hospital and after an eight-hour wait in the emergency room, found out that I twisted my ankle and fractured a couple bones in my foot. Needless to say, our vacation was no fun for me because I was in pain and had a plastic cast on my foot during the whole two week- trip to keep it level. I ended up making an appointment the day we got home to see an orthopaedist. That was definitely not what I consider fun or a great family vacation, and it really put a dent in our sightseeing plans.
