THE TEXT

1 - I was the first person in my family to go to college, and I received my bachelors in Sociology from the University of Texas. I decided to continue my education, and was accepted to a master's degree program abroad at an Austrian University to study international law and so I packed up and moved to Austria intending never to look back.

2- After a month abroad, I received the news that my father had been diagnosed with cancer. We had a close relationship, and he was proud that I was continuing my education. He did not want to be a hindrance to me, and of course asked me to finish my education abroad and take the opportunity given to me. I was faced with the hardest decision of my life. We did not know how long my dad would live, and I could not imagine him dying in Texas without me by his side. My decision was made much easier by the idea that online distance education was an option.

3- I chose to leave the program in Austria and found an online program through Jones International University that would give me a Masters in International Law. I moved home to Houston, worked during the day, studied at night, and was able to see my father every day. He was able to see that I was continuing my education, and that I would still be successful in life. I was by his side when he died gracefully, and I would never give up that experience.
